Next, a couple of questions about political parties in Scotland.

[natSlumpOpen]{open rows=3 cols=60}The SNP lost quite a lot of seats at this election and has been losing ground in the polls for some time. In your view, what is the main reason for this?

[reformScotOpen]{open rows=3 cols=60}Now here's a question about Reform UK. Like Nigel Farage's previous party, UKIP, Reform UK does much better for votes in England and Wales than in Scotland. What do you think is the main reason for that?

###Constitutional Preferences

[indyScaleBig] {scale -10 10 dk=1} Now some questions about how to govern Scotland. First, on a scale of -10 to +10, where -10 is 'Definitely No' and +10 is 'Definitely Yes', do you think that Scotland should become an independent country?

[reasonsYes if voteIntentionIndyPost == 1] {open} You said that you would vote for independence. What are your main reasons for this?

[reasonsNo if voteIntentionIndyPost == 2] {open} You said that you would vote against independence. What are your main reasons for this?

[yesFocus if voteIntentionIndyPost == 1] {single} Yes supporters have different views about how their pro-independence position should matter at election time. Which comes closest to your view about what Yes supporters should do?
<1> They should always vote for a Yes party to show their support
<2> They should only vote for a Yes party if they think that it will make independence more likely
<3> They should be focused on other things at election time
<99> Don't know

[governingOptions] {single} Here are some more detailed options for governing Scotland. Which one of the following is your preference?
<1> The Scottish Parliament should be abolished and all Scottish laws passed by Westminster again
<2> There should be no change to the present arrangements: Scotland should have a devolved Parliament with limited powers
<3> The Scottish Parliament's powers should be increased and it should raise more of its own taxes
<4> Scotland should be independent within the European Union
<5> Scotland should be independent outside the European Union

[multilevelPromises]{single}Some key areas like education and health have long been devolved to the Scottish government at Holyrood. So some people feel that the Scottish parties shouldn't be talking about them during a Westminster election campaign, because the UK government elected won't be responsible for schools and hospitals in Scotland.
